When you hear “Sakura City’s nature and wildlife”, what kind of scenery and creatures come to your mind? Sakura City is home to a rich natural environment including farmland, woodlands and the Imbanuma Lake where many forms of life thrive. The ecosystems created by this natural diversity provide invaluable benefits that support our daily lives.

In recent years, however, the decline of nature and wildlife due to changes in the global environment and the impact of invasive species has become a serious global problem. “What is biodiversity?” and “Why do we need to protect it?” Initiatives are being undertaken in Sakura City.

Inquiries: Seikatsu Kankyō-ka (Living Environment Section) ☎ 484-4278

In response to the biodiversity crisis, the concept of “nature positive” (nature restoration) has recently been promoted and is gaining attention.

Sakura City has focused on preserving the city’s representative natural environment together with its citizens. In September 2025, the Azeta Yatsu area and the Azeta Yatsu Workshop () activity plan were recognized as a “Nature Coexistence Site” by the Ministry of the Environment as an area where biodiversity conservation is being achieved through private-sector initiatives and related efforts in support of realizing a Nature Positive future. () The Azeta Yatsu Workshop is a collaborative project between citizens and the city to restore abandoned farmland in a valley and conserve the ecosystems and wildlife.

BIODIVERSITY AND OUR LIVES

Harmonizing nature and town for the future

What is Nature Positive?

Nature Positive aims to halt the loss of biodiversity by 2030, using 2020 as the baseline year and to reverse the trend toward recovery. This has been set as a global goal to realize a world in harmony with nature.

To achieve nature positivity, it is essential that we change our awareness and behavior and ensure that the entire society and economy focuses on biodiversity conservation.

Learn more about biodiversity on Kōhō Sakura, January 15th issue (in Japanese) ※Kōhō Sakura is available on the free app “Catalog Pocket” and can be translated into 10 languages.

What can we do to protect biodiversity? Making environmentally friendly choices in various aspects of our daily lives help us achieve nature positivity. For example: ♦Choose locally produced and environmentally friendly products. ♦Reduce food waste and promote recycling. ♦Implement energy conservation measures such as saving electricity and water and using public transportation. ♦Participate in nature observation and other activities.

BE CAREFUL WHEN DISPOSING OF LITHIUM-ION BATTERIES

In recent years, several municipalities have experienced fires in garbage trucks and waste disposal facilities that are believed to have been caused by mobile batteries, lithium-ion batteries, etc. Fires can damage equipment, causing continued disruption to recycling processes and requiring significant repair costs.

In Sakura city, fires believed to be caused by lithium-ion batteries mixed in with (other plastic containers and packaging" occurred at a plastic recycling facility for two consecutive months in 2020, causing the recycling processing line to be halted.

Mobile batteries and lithium-ion batteries should never be disposed

BEWARE OF MISINFORMATION ABOUT CANNABIS! FEBRUARY IS CHIBA PREFECTURE'S DRUG ABUSE AWARENESS MONTH

The abuse of drugs such as narcotics, stimulants, marijuana and so-called dangerous drugs has become a major social problem.

In particular, arrests involving cannabis among young people have been increasing in recent years, making this a growing concern. One contributing factor is the spread of false information on social media, such as claims that "cannabis is harmless". In reality, cannabis is a harmful and illegal drug that can cause hallucinations, memory impairment, and a decline in learning ability.

In addition, cases of overdose involving prescription and over-the-counter medications have risen sharply among teenagers and people in their twenties, with reports of not only emergency hospitalizations but also fatalities.

Drug abuse is extremely dangerous. Even if motivated by curiosity or taken "just for fun", using drugs can harm not only the individual but also their family and friends. If you are offered drugs, it is important to be cautious, clearly refuse and seek advice from friends or family rather than dealing with the situation alone.

Let's correctly understand the dangers of drugs and aim to create a society that does not tolerate drug abuse.
